A conversation with Professor Hoda Mahmoudi

Hoda Mahmoudi is the Bahá'í Chair for World Peace at the University of Maryland since 2012. As director, she fosters interdisciplinary analysis and discourse on global peace. Her research focuses on structural racism, women's empowerment, global governance, human nature, and environmental challenges. Previously, she served as coordinator of the Research Department at the Bahá'í World Centre and as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Northeastern Illinois University. She has authored and co-authored several books on peace, inequality, and human rights.
