"Café Allongé" Brings Performance and Coffee Together

For Immediate Release:

The performance company Spatula&Barcode invites Montreal residents and visitors to "Café Allongé", a new way to experience the city's famous café culture. On Friday and Saturday, November 18 and 19, members of the public are invited to have coffee with an artist and experience an individual table-top performance. All participants will receive free souvenir coffee mugs. The events are free but we ask that you support the host cafe. The amount you spend is up to you.

Reservations are required. For updates on the project and to make reservations, go to: <http://spatulaandbarcode.wordpress.com/>

Spatula&Barcode is a collaborative (led by Laurie Beth Clark and Michael Peterson) that makes art events out of social interaction. Past work has involved city walks in Croatia, bicycle tours in the Netherlands, and visits to remotely situated internet cafes in Morocco.
